Higher Education Updates

Message from Wendy Walsh, Higher Education Program Manager

Happy Women's History Month! I have been supported and mentored by many amazing women in emergency management, homeland security, and education fields throughout my career and am always looking for opportunities to pay this forward.

The study of collective intelligence has been growing over the past decade, and in 2001 there was some compelling research coming from MIT's Center for Collective Intelligence on the impact of women in teams. They have found that teams with more women actually outperform teams with less women. Follow-on research from MIT to explore the 'why' behind this phenomenon has found that women may have a higher degree of emotional intuition that facilitates communication in both face-to-face and online team interaction.

One of the key factors to successful emergency management is leveraging collaboration and leveraging the gifts and capabilities of the whole community. Women are an integral and critical component to realizing the FEMA values of compassion, fairness, integrity, and respect. This month is a time to focus on the contribution of women and to look for increasing the opportunities to work with and promote the perspective and work of women.

I would again like to thank all of you who have made time to send me emails regarding your vision and hopes for the Higher Education Program. If you have thoughts, ideas, and/or suggestions on the Higher Education Program, please drop me an email.
